

Fifty years ago, four African-American students sat down at the “whites-only” lunch counter at the F.W.

Woolworth “five and dime” retail store in Greensboro, N.C. For six months they sat in nonviolent protest, until finally in late July of 1960, they were served.

The International Civil Rights Center & Museum commemorates the achievements of these students and the ongoing battle for civil and human rights. The Museum’s exhibits tell the story of the Greensboro Four, as well as other key human and civil rights struggles and achievements.
